Organization Information

USRowing is a nonprofit membership organization recognized by the United States Olympic Committee as the national governing body for the sport of rowing in the United States.

USRowing selects, trains and manages the teams that represent the U.S. in international competition, including the world championships, Pan American Games and Olympic Games.

More than 75,000 individuals and 1,200 member organizations strong, USRowing serves and promotes the sport on all levels of competition. USRowing membership reflects the spectrum of American rowers – juniors, collegians, masters and those who row for recreation, competition, or fitness.

In 1982, the United States Rowing Association was formed by the merger of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, founded in 1872, and the National Women's Rowing Association, established in the early 1960s. USRowing brought these two organizations together with a name incorporating both men and women and reflecting the broader interests of rowing. In 1985, the organization moved from Philadelphia, Pa., to Indianapolis, Ind., home of several other Olympic sport governing bodies; and in 1994, Indianapolis became the only U.S. city to host a world rowing championship. In February 2006, USRowing moved its corporate headquarters to Princeton, N.J.

USRowing registers hundreds of regattas across the country each year, ensuring they are run under specific safety guidelines. The association also provides programs to educate referees and coaches. USRowing stages national championship regattas annually including the USRowing National Championships, USRowing Club National Championships, USRowing Masters National Championships, USRowing Youth National Championships and the USRowing Masters National Head Race. USRowing also conducts regional championships and national team selection events.

USRowing is a member of the United States Olympic Committee and Federation Internationale des Societes D'Aviron (FISA), the international rowing federation.

Row for the Cure

Row for the Cure, with the support of USRowing, is the rowing and water-sports community's crusade against breast cancer, raising over $1.1 million to benefit local affiliates of Komen for the Cure. With one in eight women being diagnosed with breast cancer in her lifetime, the need to fight this disease resonates clearly in rowing – a sport known for its “big boats” — 60-foot racing shells with eight rowers. The inspiration of Portland, Oregon rower Kathy Frederick, the initial Row for the Cure took place in 1994 on Portland's Willamette River as a way for the rowing community to support runners and walkers participating in the Rose City's Race for the Cure. That first regatta raised a modest $1,500. Today, with events in 15 U.S. states and Germany, Row for the Cure has blossomed into a multi-sport event that includes athletes of all ages representing four sports; rowing, canoe/kayak, dragon boat and Native American paddling. With over 20 cities having hosted a Row for the Cure, participants now raise over $300,000 annually, rowing and paddling together to save lives in their local communities.

Rowing Roots: A Brief History

Approximately 2,000 years ago, Greeks learned that an oar affixed to the side of a boat working against a fulcrum was more effective than a paddle. Rowing wasn't a sport then, rather, a means of survival for the oarsmen who maneuvered large warships in battle.

Racing soon became a sport as soon as more boats and oarsmen came about. In America, boat racing began the same way in the middle 1800s – with challenges between watermen in the New York harbor. Amateur rowing had been introduced during the first half of the century. Then, in 1852, the first-ever intercollegiate competition was a rowing race between Harvard and Yale.

Philadelphia's Schuylkill Navy, the first amateur sports association, began in 1858. Meanwhile, professional oarsmen were making their living rowing for money and astute gamblers earned much more. Eager to distinguish themselves from the pros, amateur rowers then established the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen in 1872. Now called USRowing, the NAAO was the first national governing body for sport in the United States.

By 1900, professional rowing's bad reputation of rigged races and sabotaged boats ended its popularity. Amateur rowing, however, was still flourishing. Rowing was included in the first modern Olympic Games in 1896, although bad weather forced its cancellation.

The National Women's Rowing Association (NWRA) was not founded until the early 1960s, even though women began rowing in the early 1900s. The Women's World Rowing Championships were first conducted in 1974 and women's events made their Olympic debut in Montreal in 1976. In 1982, the NAAO and NWRA united to form USRowing.

2014 World Rowing Championships Outlook

Two years after the 2012 Olympic Games in London and two years before the Olympics reconvene in 2016 in Rio de Janeiro, USRowing's plan to win more medals by focusing on fewer Olympic class boats and opening up the selection process for the remaining boat classes is proving successful.

Following the three-medal effort in London, the U.S. narrowed its attention and resources on funding only eight boats – the women's pair, women's double sculls, lightweight women's double sculls, women's quadruple sculls, lightweight men's four, men's four and men's and women's eights.

The 2013 World Rowing Championships in Chungju, South Korea, resulted in an eight-medal haul, with four of the medals coming in the funded Olympic boat classes. The women's eight won its eighth-consecutive title, the lightweight women's double won silver, and both the men's four and eight captured bronze. While the men's four had won a bronze medal in London, the repeat performance was done with only Henrik Rummel returning from the 2012 crew.

Among the 85 athletes named from the camps, through World Rowing Cup competition or the 2014 Senior I and II World Championships Trials, 21 are Olympians, Olympic spares or Paralympians, 33 have competed at a past world championships and 24 are new to the U.S. National Team.

Leading the women's team is Tom Terhaar, arguably one of the top women's head coaches in the world. Terhaar has been the women's head coach since 2001 and has made three trips to the Olympic Games. His women's eights have won one silver and two gold Olympic medals. His eights have won every world championship since 2006, and his crews have amassed a total of 26 medals at the Olympic Games and world championships.

Heading up the men's sweep camp crews will be coaches Luke McGee and Bryan Volpenhein from the USRowing Training Center – Princeton and Cameron Kiosoglous, who coaches the lightweight men's four from the USRowing Training Center – Oklahoma City.

The United States will have 26 crews competing in the men's single sculls, women's single sculls, lightweight men's single sculls, lightweight women's single sculls, men's double sculls, women's double sculls, lightweight men's double sculls, lightweight women's double sculls, men's quadruple sculls, women's quadruple sculls, lightweight men's quadruple sculls, lightweight women's quadruple sculls, men's pair, women's pair, men's pair with coxswain, lightweight men's pair, men's four, women's four, lightweight men's four, men's eight, women's eight, lightweight men's eight, arms and shoulders men's single sculls, arms and shoulders women's single sculls, legs, trunk and arms mixed double sculls and legs, trunk and arms four with coxswain.

The United States won a total of eight medals at the 2013 World Rowing Championships in Chungju, South Korea. The women's eight and four won gold, the lightweight women's double won silver and the men's four and eight took bronze. In the non-Olympic events, the lightweight women's quad won silver, the lightweight men's eight took bronze and the legs, trunk and arms double won bronze.

Three other crews reached the final including the women's quad, women's pair and lightweight men's four, which advanced to the medal round for the first time in 13 years. For the women's eight, it was an eighth-consecutive world championship title, and for the men's eight, it was the first medal since the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing.

Men's Single Sculls

This is 33-year-old Yohann Rigogne's first time rowing for the U.S. team. The Vesper Boat Club single sculler began rowing in 1995 in France and won a French national title in the men's junior double in 1998. He continued rowing and was a member of the Under 23 French national team in 2000. After moving to the United States in 2005, he coached high school rowing and moved to Philadelphia in 2010 and has been rowing competitively in the single since.

"I started out fast, because they all knew I had been starting fast in the other races," said Rigogne, on winning his single final. "My plan was to start fast and stay ahead. I didn't think too much about the selection the first 1,500 meters, but once I hit the red buoys and had it in my pocket, I was very happy. I just tried not to die, or catch a crab or anything like that."

Women's Single Sculls

Returning to the event on the international stage is Cambridge Boat Club's Gevvie Stone (Newton, Mass.). Stone competed in the event in the 2012 Olympic Games in London, finishing seventh, then left international competition to complete her medical degree at Tufts University School of Medicine.

Only days after her last exam, Stone raced at the 2014 National Selection Regatta 1 and won the event, earning the right to compete at a world cup competition and earn a possible berth on the 2014 U.S. National Team.

Surprised by her success at the selection regatta, Stone said, "I was definitely surprised. Coming into this, I wanted to prove that I could be in the fight in the next two years with Rio in mind."

She completed her quest for a return to the world championships, her first since 2011, by securing her spot on the team with a fifth place finish at World Rowing Cup II.

Lightweight Men's Single Sculls

Making a return to the senior world championship for the fourth time since 2011 in the lightweight single is Andrew Campbell, Jr. The Cambridge Boat Club sculler won a bronze medal in the event at the combined senior and junior world championships in 2012 and then won the event at the 2013 World Rowing Under 23 Championships.

He finished a personally disappointing seventh at the 2013 world championships, but came back in 2014 to again race in dual world championships. He defended his title at the 2014 World Rowing Under 23 Championships, winning gold, and is now focused on Amsterdam.

“It’s amazing,” said Campbell, following his win in Varese, Italy. “I’m so happy to have been able to repeat last year’s performance. It’s hard coming back the next year, because you’re defending. To put that out of mind is difficult, but I think we did a good job handling it and taking this and its own separate piece.”

Lightweight Women’s Single Sculls

After winning a silver medal in the lightweight women’s double sculls in 2013 with Kristin Hedstrom, Kate Bertko (Oakland, Calif.) and Hedstrom were defeated at the second national selection regatta. Bertko returned to California Rowing Club, and shifted her focus to the lightweight single. Bertko then won the event at trials and was named to the 2014 U.S. National Team.

Men’s Double Sculls

USRowing Training Center – Princeton’s Ian Silveira (West Bloomfield, Mich.) and Alex Karwoski (Hollis, N.H.) were part of the men’s sweep team at the 2013 World Rowing Championships. Silveira won a bronze medal in the eight and Karwoski finished 14th in the men’s pair. After camp boat selections were made, the two began training in small boats, and entered the men’s double event at trials. They advanced to the final through the repechages and won, securing their spot on the 2014 U.S. National Team.

“(Being on the team) feels fantastic,” said Silveira, now a seven-time national team athlete. “Selection didn’t go well this year in the eight, and we were on the outside for a while. We put this boat together three weeks ago, and we found speed pretty quickly. We thought we could have a chance, and to make it happen is exciting.”

Women’s Double Sculls

Ellen Tomek (Flushing, Mich.) and Meghan O’Leary (Baton Rouge, La.) represented the U.S. in this event last year and finished seventh. The two vowed to stay in the boat class together and spent the off-season at the USRowing Training Center – Oklahoma City, training under coach Jeremy Ivey.

They won the event at National Selection Regatta 2 and then earned a berth to the 2014 squad with their silver-medal finish at the second world cup.

“The goal coming into the qualification regatta was top six,” said O’Leary, following the second-place finish. “We know that we’re better than that. We wanted to prove something and take home a medal. It’s the deepest doubles field in a long time, so the challenge was tough, and we’re excited to see where we are right now. We just need to keep pushing forward.”

Lightweight Men's Double Sculls

Craftsbury Sculling Center's Josh Konieczny (Millbury, Ohio) and Cambridge Boat Club's Austin Meyer (Cohoes, N.Y.) won their event at NSR 2 and went on to race for a spot on the world championships team at the second world cup. They finished fourth in the final to secure a place on the roster.

"This feels good," said Meyer, after making the final in France. "There was a lot of hard work behind this, and it's good to come here and put the U.S. in the final for the lightweight double. I'm really excited."

Lightweight Women's Double Sculls

USRowing Training Center – Oklahoma City's Michelle Sechser (Folsom, Calif.) and Devery Karz (Park City, Utah) won the lightweight women's double sculls event at the 2014 National Selection Regatta 2 and then raced at World Rowing Cup II, where they finished eighth. Their placement was not enough to earn an automatic berth to the team. But they did not miss their second chance at trials, where they defeated 2012 Olympian Kristin Hedstrom (Concord, Mass.) and Nancy Miles (Bainbridge Island, Wash.) in the two-boat final.

Sechser represented the U.S. in the lightweight single at last year's world championship, finishing seventh. This is Karz's first appearance on the senior team.

"This feels pretty amazing," said Karz, after winning the final at trials. "It's my first time on the senior national team in an Olympic-class boat, and I couldn't ask for a better stroke seat. It's awesome. We're a really new crew. We were lucky to have Jeremy and the training center (in Oklahoma City) to bring us together."

Men's Pair

After winning a bronze medal in the four at the 2012 Olympic Games in London, Charlie Cole (New Canaan, Conn.) and Glenn Ochal (Philadelphia, Pa.) each took a season off from the national team with plans to return to the squad and race the pair, and they did, going up against two other national team camp athletes London Olympian in the eight Ross James and David Eick at trials.

"It's a big step in the process," said Ochal. "We have bigger goals, and this was sort of a checkpoint along the way for next year and the year after. Making the team is great, and this is one of those necessary steps. Really, this is just our second race. We raced at NSR and then here. We'll need what we learned today in Amsterdam."

Women's Pair

Seven-time U.S. national team athlete and two-time Olympian Megan Kalmoe (St. Croix Falls, Wis.) hasn't competed at a world championships in a sweep boat since winning gold in the four at the 2005 World Rowing Under 23 Championships. But the London bronze medalist teamed up with Kerry Simmonds (San Diego, Calif.), who debuted on the senior team with a gold medal in the eight in 2013, and they were a good match from the start.

The USRowing Training Center – Princeton pair won the event at the first National Selection Regatta and earned the right to compete for a berth on the team as the pair at the second world cup in France, where they finished second to defending Olympic champions from Great Britain, Helen Glover and Heather Stanning. That final included three other U.S. crews.

“I made a point of giving a shout out on the line to the rest of our team to work as a team,” said Kalmoe. “Our teammates push us all year so it was really special to have them here to push us,” added Simmonds. “You just kind of feed off that kind of vibe.”

Lightweight Men’s Pair

The U.S. will be represented in this event by trials winners, Michael Wales (Seattle, Wash.) of Cambridge Boat Club and Tyler Nase (Phoenixville, Pa.) of Malta Boat Club. Wales and Nase finished second in the event at the 2013 World Rowing Cup in Lucerne, Switzerland. The U.S. finished eighth in this event at the 2013 World Rowing Championships.

Men’s Pair with Coxswain

Coxed by Jack Carlson (Weston, Mass.) in his second appearance on the national team, the Penn A.C. Rowing Association’s men’s coxed pair will be powered by Taylor Brown (Winter Park, Fla.) and Henry Hoffstot (Ligonier, Pa.). This is the first world championship for both athletes.

Men’s Quadruple Sculls

The U.S. finished 13th last year in Chungju, South Korea, but look to challenge for a podium spot this year after a strong performance against an experienced field at the final world cup stop in Lucerne. The Craftsbury Sculling Center crew of Benjamin Dann (Pound Ridge, N.J.), John Graves (Cincinnati, Ohio), Stephen Whelpley (Mequon, Wis.) and Peter Graves (Cincinnati, Ohio) won the Senior 1 World Championships trials and then went to Europe to test their speed. After rowing in a semifinal at the Royal Henley Regatta in London, they traveled to Lucerne and took a bronze medal.

"We were learning with every race, and we still are," said Whelpley, following trials. "Each time we went into a race, we talked about one, or maybe a handful of things, we knew we had to change."

Women’s Quadruple Sculls

This year’s USRowing Training Center – Princeton women’s quad features two athletes new to the senior team including Tracy Eisser (Fair Lawn, N.J.) and Grace Latz (Jackson, Mich.) and two second-year senior team members who are competing in a sculling boat internationally for the first time, Felice Mueller (Cleveland, Ohio) and Olivia Coffey (Watkins Glenn, N.Y.).

While new to the event, Mueller and Coffey have already had success on the world level, winning gold in the women’s four at the 2013 World Rowing Championships. In addition, Mueller, Eisser and Latz won gold in the quad at this year’s World Rowing Cup II.

Lightweight Men’s Quadruple Sculls

The U.S. narrowly missed the finals in this event in 2012 and 2013 and are hoping for a better result this summer with an entirely new crew from Riverside Boat Club. Under the guidance of 2012 Olympian Margot Shumway, the crew of Andrew Neils (Manhattan, Kansas), Peter Schmidt (Providence, R.I.), Jacob Georgeson (North Olmsted, Ohio) and Kyle Lafferty (Hockessin, Del.), won the event at the first senior trials.

Lightweight Women's Quadruple Sculls

The U.S. won a silver medal last year in South Korea and have two of the crew returning this year in Hillary Saeger (Dedham, Mass.), who also won a bronze medal in the event in 2011, and Helen Tompkins (Friendswood, Texas.). Rounding out the Vesper Boat Club crew is Sarah Giancola (Buffalo, N.Y.) and Mary Jones (Huntsville, Ala.).

Men's Four

All four members of the 2013 bronze medal crew will be returning again this year. After its performance last year, this crew remained together and won a second bronze at the second world cup. The USRowing Training Center – Princeton crew features London bronze medalist in the event Henrik Rummel (Pittsford, N.Y.), London spare Michael Gennaro (Havertown, Penn.), London Olympian in the eight Grant James (DeKalb, Ill.), and Seth Weil (Menlo Park, Calif.).

This is a confident crew that has been performing at the top internationally since they debuted in world cup competition in 2013. After taking bronze on Lake Aiguebelette, Rummel summed up the race saying, “It was a good effort, a good race. I think we just lost a little pop in the last six hundred. Hopefully we get a little free speed there and go back and work hard and get faster.”

Women's Four

Traditionally the women's four has been used as a development boat for the U.S. women's team and has featured athletes rowing in their first world championship. This year, though, the 2014 USRowing Training Center – Princeton boat has some serious experience on the oars, with two-time Olympic champion in the eight Susan Francia (Abington, Pa.), London bronze medalist in the quad, Adrienne Martelli (University Place, Wash.), 2013 gold medalist in the four, Tessa Gobo (Chesterfield, N.H.) and 2013 gold medalist in the eight, Emily Regan (Buffalo, N.Y.).

Lightweight Men's Four

A priority boat class for the U.S., the lightweight men's four training out of the USRowing Training Center – Oklahoma City under coach Cameron Kiosoglous has been making continuous strides. At the 2013 World Rowing Championships, the boat reached the final for the first time in 13 years, finishing fifth. The 2014 boat has three of the crew returning in Anthony Fahden (Lafayette, Calif.), Will Daly (Vail, Colo.) and Robin Prendes (Miami, Fla.).

Daly rowed in the event at the 2008 Olympic Games, while Fahden and Prendes were in the boat at the 2012 Olympic Games. New to the crew is Edward “Mix” King (Ironton, Mo.), who has represented the U.S. in the event twice at the World Rowing Under 23 Championships.

Men's Eight

The men's eight returned to the podium for the first time since the 2008 Olympic Games with a bronze-medal performance in South Korea. The crew again reached the podium at the second world cup this past June. Five of the 2013 crew is returning, with 2012 Olympian David Banks rejoining the senior squad after taking time away from international racing following the men's eight's fourth-place finish in London.

The crew includes two other London Olympians in coxswain Zach Vlahos (Piedmont, Calif.) and Steve Kasprzyk (Cinnaminson, N.J.). Returning from last year are Tom Dethlefs (Lawrenceville, N.J.), Nareg Guregian (North Hills, Calif.), Matt Miller (Fairfax, Va.), Rob Munn (Redmond, Wash.) and Austin Hack (Old Lyme, Conn.). New to the crew and appearing on the national team for the first time is Sam Dommer (Folsom, Calif.).

After finishing third last summer, the men's squad has been working on faster starts and so far this year, it has been working. "It's something we have been working on, having a stronger start," Vlahos said, after the world cup win in June. "We wanted to execute it here. We wanted to execute our race plan and I think we did that today. We happened to cross the line first, but more important to us was, we executed our plan and our step towards our main goal of winning the world championships."

Women's Eight

No matter what the lineup is or who is in the boat, the U.S. women's eight is the gold standard in women's rowing. Under head coach Tom Terhaar, the women eight has won one silver and two gold Olympic medals. His eight has won every world championship since 2006, and his crews have amassed a total of 26 medals at the Olympic Games and world championships, combined.

This year has been no different. Racing at the second world cup, Terhaar doubled up nearly his entire team, sending four pairs to the line from his eight lineup. All four made the final, one took silver, another bronze. A few hours later, they went to the line in the eight and rowed a heart-stopping, come-from-behind race that saw them nip Canada at the line for gold.

Following the race, coxswain Katelin Snyder (Winter Park, Fla.) said she never doubted the outcome. "This is our first test of our speed this season, and the other boats we were racing are incredibly fast. We got off the line and looked around and realized we needed to push the base pace now, we can't wait," said Snyder.

"All nine of us believe in each other and ourselves, and I think it was that belief and hard work that eventually paid off, but didn't pay off until like what seemed the very end. But I don't think there was a moment in the race where I was worried," she said. "I really believed in us. We kind of were able to look around at 400 meters and decided it was time."

The USRowing Training Center – Princeton lineup will have seven off this year's world cup team and seven of the crew that won gold at the 2013 World Rowing Championships. The lineup has three Olympians including 2008 and 2012 Olympic champion Caroline Lind (Greensboro, N.C.), 2012 Olympic champion Meghan Musnicki (Naples, N.Y.) and also includes the return of two-time Olympic champion Eleanor Logan (Boothbay Harbor, Maine), who raced the single in the final at last year's world championship.

Also returning to the crew from last year is Grace Luczak (Ann Arbor, Mich.), Lauren Schmetterling (Moorestown, N.J.), Vicky Opitz (Middleton, Wis.) and Amanda Polk (Pittsburgh, Penn.). Heidi Robbins (Hanover, N.H.), who was injured in training last summer and was unable to compete in the eight, is back in the stroke seat.

Lightweight Men's Eight

Of the team that finished third in a three-boat race in 2013, only two athletes return for 2014 – Peter Gibson (Belmont, Mass) and Josh Getz (Ann Arbor, Mich.). This year's team was selected from the lightweight men's camp at the USRowing Training Center – Oklahoma City. Representing the U.S. is coxswain Stephen Young (Tampa, Fla.), Andrew Weiland (Upper Arlington, Ohio), Gibson, Dan Kirrane (Rockville Centre, N.Y.), Joseph Hanlon (Washington, D.C.), Matthew O'Leary (Westwood, Mass.), Getz, Andrew Hakanson (Newtown Square, Pa.) and Kyle Traub (Eastern, Mass.).

Men's Arms and Shoulders Single Sculls

New to the sport this year is Upper Arlington Crew's Blake Haxton (Columbus, Ohio). Just a few weeks into his training at Upper Arlington High School, Haxton contracted a form of virus that destroys flesh and lost both his legs. After attending The Ohio State University, he returned to the sport as a coach, and then started erging. Haxton learned that he was still strong enough to score well on the erg with just his arms and shoulders, and he decided to try adaptive rowing. At 23, he won the Para-Rowing trials, defeating both two-time Paralympian Ron Harvey (Downingtown, Pa.) and Daniel Ahr (Mount Laurel, N.J.) who represented the U.S. in the event at last year's world championships.

Women's Arms and Shoulders Single Sculls

This year, the U.S. will also have a new representative in the women's arms and shoulders single sculls. CRI's KateLynne Steinke (East Falmouth, Mass.), a former equestrian athlete, who lost her left leg in a car accident, caught the attention of adaptive coaches and Para-Rowing High Performance Director, Tom Darling, at a Gateway To Gold event in March 2014. She trained at CRI, went to trials and defeated last year's Para-Rowing women's single sculler Dana Fink.

Legs, Trunk and Arms Mixed Double Sculls

Andrew Johnson (Riverside, Conn.) has been a fixture on the U.S. National Team since 2009, including the London 2012 Paralympic Team. But he spent those six seasons in the legs, trunk and arms mixed four with coxswain. This year, Johnson teamed up with Stephanie Cox (Raleigh, N.C.) at Community Rowing, Inc., and rowed uncontested at trials to earn a spot on the team in the legs, trunk and arms mixed double.

Legs, Trunk and Arms Mixed Four with Coxswain

Two members of last year's team were named to the squad that will represent the U.S. in the legs, trunk and arms mixed four with coxswain, including coxswain Jenny Sichel (Clifton, N.J.) and Jaclyn Smith (Williston Park, N.Y.). Also named to the team from Community Rowing, Inc., is Ricky Vandegrift (Cincinnati, Ohio), Zachary Burns (Ann Arbor, Mich.) and Dani Hansen (Peterson, Calif.).

National Teams: One – 2014

International Results: Reached the semifinal at 2014 Royal Henley Regatta in the Visitors Cup . . . Won the lightweight four at the 2013 Canadian Henley . . . Won the lightweight eight at the 2013 Canadian Henley Won the lightweight eight dash at the 2013 Canadian Henley.

National Results: Won the open eight and finished third at the 2014 USRowing National Championships . . . Finished second in the four at the 2013 USRowing National Championships.

Personal: Kyle was captain of his high school and college teams . . . He enjoys fishing, surfing, cycling and pretty much all other water sports . . . Kyle chose rowing because he rowed at Kent School under Hart Perry. He later returned to teach and be the Athletic Trainer . . . His older sister rowed before me at Kent as well as a cousin “so when I came up it was only natural that I at least give it a try. Ever since the first day on the river, I have yet to put down the oar . . . He lists his father as the most influential person in his sporting career. “Although my mother was a good athlete in her own right, he was a DIII All American for swimming and held a backstroke record in Kent’s pool for almost 25 years. He has also been an ocean lifeguard for almost just as long and still exercises at least once a day. He has always been involved in my sporting career, and he will always be the first person I turn to when I am struggling or need some advice.” . . . Kyla hopes to continue his education in nutrition and help elite athletes achieve their goals . . . He also hopes to be able to coach.

International Results: Won bronze in the quadruple sculls at the 2014 World Rowing Cup III... Finished 13th in the single sculls at the 2013 World Rowing Championships... Reached the semifinals of the double sculls Challenge Cup at the 2012 Royal Canadian Henley... Finished 19th in the double sculls at 2010 World Rowing Cup #3 in Lucerne... Finished ninth in the double sculls at the 2009 World Rowing Cup #3.

National Results: Won the quadruple sculls at the 2014 Senior I World Championship Trials. . . Won the singles sculls at the 2014 National Selection Regatta 1 . . . Won the single sculls at 2013 Senior World Championship Trials... Won gold in the single sculls at 2013 USRowing National Championships... Finished second in the single sculls at the 2013 National Selection Regatta #1... Finished second in the single sculls at the 2012 Head of the Charles Regatta... Finished second in the double sculls at the 2012 Non-Qualified Small Boat Olympic Trials... Finished third in the double sculls at 2011 World Championships Trials... Won gold in the double at 2011 USRowing National Championships... Finished third in the double sculls at the 2011 National Selection Regatta #3... Won gold in the double sculls at 2010 USRowing National Championships... Finished second in the double sculls at the 2009 World Championships Trials... Won gold in the double sculls at 2009 USRowing National Championships... Finished fourth in the single sculls at the 2008 U.S. Olympic Trials – Rowing... Won the single sculls at the 2008 USRowing Club National Championships.

Personal: Steve has a dog named Tanka... His uncle, Don Endrizzi, rowed at Columbia University, but predominantly raced flat water kayaks, and put the thought of rowing in his head... His college roommate and national teamer, Ted Farwell helped plant the seed for post-collegiate rowing... His middle name is "Hap" because his mother refused to incorporate his father's literal name, Harry.

Finished 12th in the eight at the 2009 Eastern Sprints... Finished eighth in the four with coxswain at the 2008 IRA Championships.

Personal: Stephen's hobbies include sailing, fishing, wakeboarding, sculling and automotive restoration... His most memorable sporting achievement is fending off Olympic gold-medalists Greg and Johnny Searle to win the first round of the Ladies' Challenge Plate at the 2009 Henley Royal Regatta... Stephen competed in elite-level sailing in Greece, Brazil, Italy and Peru from 1999- 2001... He lists MIT coach, Dan Perkins, as the most influential person in his sporting career because he convinced Stephen that he could be good enough to cox at the elite level and was the catalyst that drove his class to a record-breaking senior year at MIT... Stephen aspires to earn a masters degree in Naval Architecture and design America's Cup sailboats... He hopes to someday compete at the Olympics in either rowing or sailing.

Viewer's Guide

The Events

There are 21 events in the World Rowing Championships – 13 for men and eight for women. Events are divided into two disciplines: sweep rowing and sculling, and two categories within those: lightweight and open.

Sculling and Sweep Rowing

Athletes with two oars – one in each hand – are scullers. There are three sculling events: the single – 1x (one person), the double – 2x (two) and the quad – 4x (four).

Athletes with only one oar are sweep rowers. Sweep boats may or may not carry a coxswain (pronounced cox-en) to steer and be the on-the-water coach. In boats without coxswains, one of the rowers steers by moving the rudder with his or her foot. Sweep rowers come in pairs with a coxswain (2+) and pairs without (2-), fours with a coxswain (4+) and fours without (4-) and the eight (8+), which always carries a coxswain. The eight is the fastest boat on the water. A world-level men's eight is capable of moving almost 14 miles per hour.

The pairs and fours with coxswain are sometimes the hardest to recognize because of where the coxswain is sitting. Although the coxswain is almost always facing the rowers in an eight, in pairs and fours the coxswain may be facing the rowers in the stern or looking down the course, lying down in the bow, where he or she is difficult to see.

Athletes are identified by their seat in the boat. The athlete in the bow is seat No. 1. That's the person who crosses the finish line first (which makes it easy to remember – first across the line is No. 1 seat). The person in front of the bow is No. 2, then No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, No. 6, No. 7 and No. 8 (known as the stroke). The stroke of the boat must be a strong rower with excellent technique, since the stroke sets the rhythm and number of strokes per minute the rest of the crew must follow.

Lightweight and Open Weight

An athlete of any weight can enter the open categories, although the average woman in an open race will approach 6' in height and an average open weight man 6'6". Lightweight Men cannot weigh more than 160 pounds and the average weight of the entire boat cannot exceed 155 pounds. Lightweight Women cannot weigh more than 130 pounds and the average weight of the entire boat cannot exceed 125 pounds.

Lightweights row the same events as open weight athletes, except that other than the men's lightweight eight, they do not carry coxswains, so there is no lightweight 2+ or 4+.

The Race

All events at the Olympic Games or World Rowing Championships are 2,000 meters, or approximately 1.25 miles. The racecourse is divided into six lanes and each 500-meter section is marked with buoys.

The race begins with all boats aligned at the start in the lanes they've been assigned. Individuals in each lane hold the stern of each boat steady while an official, known as the aligner, ensures that each boat is even with the others and squarely facing the course.

Each crew is allowed one false start; two means disqualification. If within the first 100 meters there is legitimate equipment breakage (e.g., an oar snaps in two), the race will be stopped and restarted with repaired equipment.

The stroke rate (the number of rowing strokes per minute that a crew is taking) is high at the start – maybe 45 to even 50 for an eight, 38 to 42 for a single scull. Then, the crew will “settle” into the body of the race and drop the rating back – 38 to 40 for an eight, 32 to 36 for a single. The coach and the way the race is going determine when the crew will sprint, but finishing stroke rates of 46+ in the last 200 meters aren’t unheard of. However, higher stroke rates are not always indicative of speed. A strong, technically talented crew may be able to cover more water faster than a less capable crew rowing a high stroke rate.

Unlike canoe/kayak competitions, rowers are allowed to leave their lanes without penalty, so long as they do not interfere with anyone else’s opportunity to win. An official follows the crews to ensure safety and fairness.

Despite the exhaustion that follows each race, the crew will row for five to 10 minutes afterwards in order to cool down. In rowing, the medal ceremonies include the shells. The three medal-winning crews row to the awards dock, climb out of their shells and receive their medals before rowing away.

The Stroke

The whole body is involved in moving a shell through the water. Although rowing tends to look like an upper body sport, the strength of the rowing stroke comes from the legs.

The stroke is made up of four parts: Catch, Drive, Finish and Recovery. As the stroke begins, the rower is coiled forward on the sliding seat, with knees bent and arms outstretched. At the catch, the athlete drops the oar blade vertically into the water.

At the beginning of the drive, the body position doesn’t change – all the work is done by the legs. As the upper body begins to uncoil, the arms begin their work, drawing the oar blades through the water. Continuing the drive, the rowers move their hands quickly into the body, which by this time is in a slight “layback” position, requiring strong abdominal muscles.

During the finish, the oar handle is moved down, drawing the oar blade out of the water. At the same time, the rower “feathers” the oar – turning the oar handle – so that the oar blade changes from a vertical position to a horizontal one. The oar remains out of the water as the rower begins recovery, moving the hands away from the body and past the knees. The body follows the hands and the sliding seat moves forward until, knees bent, the rower is ready for the next catch.

The Equipment

Oars

Oars move the boat through the water and act as balancers. Sweep oars are longer than sculling oars and may have wooden handles instead of rubber grips. The shaft of the oar is made of extremely lightweight carbon fiber instead of the heavier wood used years ago.

The popular “hatchet” blade – named because of its cleaver-like shape – is about 20 percent larger than previous blades. Its larger surface area has made it the almost-universal choice among world-level rowers.

The Boats – Sculls and Shells

All rowing boats can be called shells. Rowing boats with scullers in them (each person having two oars) are called sculls, e.g. single scull, double scull, quadruple scull. So, all sculls are shells but not vice versa. Originally made of wood, today’s boats – especially those used in competition – are made of honeycombed carbon fiber. They are light and appear fragile but are crafted to be strong and stiff in the water.

The smallest boat – the single scull – is approximately 27 feet long and as narrow as 10 inches across. At 58 feet, the eight is the longest boat on the water.

The oars are attached to the boat with riggers, which provide a fulcrum for the levering action of rowing. Generally, sweep rowers sit in configurations that have the oars alternating from side to side along the boat. But sometimes, most typically in the 4- or 4+, the coach will rig the boat so that two consecutive rowers have their oars on the same side in order to equalize individual athlete power.

Race Watching

The crew that's making it look easy is most likely the one doing the best job. While you're watching, look for...

- Continuous, fluid motion of the rowers. The rowing motion shouldn't have a discernable end or beginning.
- Synchronization. Rowers strive for perfect synchronization in the boat.
- Clean catches of the oar. If you see a lot of splash, the oars aren't entering the water correctly. The catch should happen at the end of the recovery, when the hands are as far ahead of the rower as possible. Rowers who uncoil before they drop the oar are sacrificing speed and not getting a complete drive.
- Even oar blade feathering. When the blades are brought out of the water, they should all move horizontally close to the water and at the same height. It's not easy, especially if the water is rough.
- The most consistent speed. Shells don't move like a car – they're slowest at the catch, quickest at the release. The good crews time the catch at just the right moment to maintain the speed of the shell.
- Rowing looks graceful, elegant and sometimes effortless when it's done well. Don't be fooled. Rowers haven't been called the world's most physically fit athletes for nothing. A 2,000-meter rowing race demands virtually everything a human being can physically bring to an athletic competition – aerobic ability, technical talent, exceptional mental discipline, ability to utilize oxygen efficiently and in huge amounts, balance, pain tolerance and the ability to continue to work when the body is demanding that you stop.

More Race Watching Tips

- Race times can vary considerably depending upon the course and weather conditions. Tailwinds will improve times, while headwinds and crosswinds will hamper them.
- If a crew "catches a crab," it means the oar blade has entered the water at an angle instead of perpendicularly. The oar blade gets caught under the surface and will slow or even stop a shell.
- A "Power 10" is a call by the coxswain for 10 of the crew's best, most powerful strokes. Good coxswains read the course to know how many strokes remain for their crew to count down to the finish.
- Crews are identified by their oar blade design. The USA blades are red on top and blue on the bottom, with a white triangle at the tip.
- It doesn't matter whether you win an Olympic medal or don't make the finals, each crew still carries their boat back to the rack.
- Coxswains from first-place boats worldwide are thrown into the water by their crews. Coxswains don't, and probably never did, yell "stroke! stroke!" Similar to a jockey, their job is to implement the coach's strategy during the race, in addition to steering and letting the rowers know where they stand in the race and what they need to do to win.

FISA Progression System: The Route to the Finals

For a complete schedule of racing, visit www.worldrowing.com.

Events with 12 or fewer boats start with two heats. The best boats in heats 1 and 2 qualify for final A, which determines places 1–6 (including the medals). Unsuccessful boats from the heats compete in the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for final A. Unsuccessful boats from the repechage go forward to final B, which determines places 7–12.

Events with 13–18 boats begin with heats, from which the best boats qualify directly for semi-finals A/B. All other boats progress to the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for the semi-finals. The best three boats in semi-finals A/B qualify for final A, which determines places 1–6 (including the medals). Unsuccessful boats from semi-finals A/B go forward to final B, which determines places 7–12. Unsuccessful boats from the repechage go forward to final C, which determines places 13–18.

Events with 19–24 boats begin with heats, from which the best boats qualify directly for semi-finals A/B. All other boats progress to the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for the semi-finals. The best three boats in semi-finals A/B qualify for final A, which determines places 1–6 (including the medals). Unsuccessful boats from semi-finals A/B go forward to final B, which determines places 7–12. Unsuccessful boats from the repechage go to semi-finals C/D; from here, they go either to final C (places 13–18) or final D (places 19–24).

If there are more than 24 boats in an event, the four best boats from each heat go through to the quarterfinals, with the other boats competing in a repechage to fill the remaining quarterfinal places. The best three boats from each quarter-final progress to the semi-finals, with the top three from each semi-final advancing to final A. The other boats compete in finals B, C, D and E (which rank boats from seven downwards).

Events with 25 or more boats begin with heats, and the four best boats in each heat qualify directly for the quarterfinals. All other boats compete in the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for the quarterfinals. The best three boats in each quarter-final qualify for semi-finals A/B, with the best three boats in each semi-final qualifying for final A. All other boats progress through a series of races to finals B, C, D, E and (if necessary) F, which determine the other placing.

Rowing competitions are 2,000 meters, or approximately 1.25 miles. Competitions utilize a double-elimination system, which means each participant gets at least two opportunities to advance beyond the initial round. The double-elimination system makes it possible for the most competitive boats to advance, even if the top individuals or crews are in the same heat.

Every race consists of no more than six boats. Competitions begin with heats. Depending on the number of entries, a prescribed number of boats (see chart below) from each heat will advance to either a semifinal or directly to the finals. The remaining boats go to a repechage, or second-chance race. Again, a predetermined number of boats will advance from the repechage to either the semifinals or finals.

At the Olympic Games and world championships, every place in every event is determined. In other words, if there are 24 entries in an event, some crew will finish in 24th place. The “Final” determines places 1-6. The “Petite” or “B” final determines places 7-12, and so on.

Reading the Results Sheet

In the official results sheets printed by World Rowing, crews are listed in the order they finish. The second column indicates the lane number. The three-letter code for the country is in the third column followed by the names of each athlete. The name at the top of the list is the bow, the person who will cross the finish line first.

The next four columns are for race times. The top line is the total elapsed time at each quarter of the race. Below the total elapsed time is the split for that 500 meters. The third line indicates the time lapse between this crew and the first crew to reach that mark.

In the upper right corner of the official results sheet, there are two large letter/number combinations. The top combination identifies the type of race – a heat, a repechage, a semifinal or a final.

At the bottom of the official results sheet is a small box with the progression and qualification spelled out. In the center of the page are the date and time of the race.

On www.worldrowing.com, the first column lists the race number followed by the event category. In the next column, the two letter/number combination identifies the race. The next six columns indicate the place, country and final time.

Race Identification Codes include:

E = Elimination heats

R = Repechage

D = Semifinal

DC/D = Semifinals for places 13-18/19-24

FA = Final, results for places 1-6

FB = Petite Final, results for places 7-12

FC = Final results for places 13-18

FD = Final results for places 19-24

Rowing Quick Facts

- Rowing is one of the original sports in the modern Olympic Games. Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympics, was a rower.
- Eight-oared shells are about 60-feet long, about 20 yards on a football field.
- Rowing was the first intercollegiate sport contested in the United States. The first rowing race was between Harvard University and Yale University in 1852.
- Physiologically, rowers are superb examples of physical conditioning. Cross-country skiers and long distance speed skaters are comparable in terms of the physical demands the sport places on the athletes.
- An eight, which carries more than three-quarters of a ton (1,750 pounds), may weigh as little as 200 pounds. The boats are made of fiberglass composite material.
- Singles may be as narrow as 10 inches across, weigh only 30.86 pounds, and stretch nearly 27-feet long.
- FISA, the international governing body of the sport, requires all eights used in international competition to be sectional, so that crews who must disassemble and ship their boats overseas in standard shipping containers will not be at a disadvantage.
- The first amateur sport organization was a rowing club, Philadelphia's Schuylkill Navy, founded in 1858.
- From 1920 through 1956, the United States won the gold medal in the men's eight at every Olympic Games.
- The first national governing body for a sport in the United States was for rowing. Founded as the National Association for Amateur Oarsmen in 1872, it was changed in 1982 to the United States Rowing Association.
- Yale College founded the first collegiate boat club in the U.S. in 1843.
- FISA, the first international sports federation, was founded in 1892.
- Dr. Benjamin Spock, the famous doctor, was an Olympic rower in 1924 and won a gold medal in the eight. Gregory Peck rowed at the University of California in 1937.
- Physiologists claim that rowing a 2,000-meter race – equivalent to 1.25 miles – is equal to playing back-to-back basketball games. All Olympic events are contested over a 2,000-meter course with six lanes. In the 1976, 1980, and 1984 Olympics, women raced 1,000 meters.
- In 2013, the U.S. women's eight set a new world best time (5:54.16) in its final at the World Rowing Cup III in Lucerne, Switzerland. The United States is the two-time defending Olympic champion in the event (2008, 2012).
- The world best time for the men's eight is 5 minutes, 19.85 seconds or 13.98 miles per hour.

Glossary of Rowing Terms

Bow: The forward section of the boat. The first part of the boat to cross the finish line. Also, the person in the seat closest to the bow, who crosses the finish line first.

Button: A wide collar on the oar that keeps it from slipping through the oarlock.

Coxswain: The person who steers the shell and is the on-the-water coach for the crew.

Deck: The part of the shell at the bow and stern that is covered with fiberglass cloth or a thin plastic.

Ergometer: Rowers call it an “erg.” It’s a rowing machine that closely approximates the actual rowing motion. The rowers’ choice is the Concept2, which utilizes a flywheel and a digital readout so that the rower can measure his “strokes per minute” and the distance covered.

FISA: Short for Federation Internationale des Societes d’Aviron. The international governing body for the sport of rowing, established in 1892.

Gate: The bar across the oarlock that keeps the oar in place.

German rigging: A different way of setting up which side of the boat the oars are on in a sweep boat. Instead of alternating from side to side all the way from bow to stern, in a German rigged boat, two consecutive rowers have oars on the same side.

Lightweight: Refers to the rowers, not the boats; there is a maximum weight for each rower in a lightweight event as well as a boat average.

Oar: Used to drive the boat forward; rowers do not use paddles.

Port: The left side of the boat, while facing forward, in the direction of the movement.

Power 10: A call for rowers to do 10 of their best, most powerful strokes. It’s a strategy used to pull ahead of a competitor.

Repechage: The second-chance race, which ensures that everyone has two chances to advance from preliminary races since there is no seeding in the heats.

Rigger: The triangular shaped metal device that is bolted onto the side of the boat and holds the oars.

Run: The run is the distance the shell moves during one stroke. You can figure it by looking for the distance between the puddles made by the same oar.

Sculls: One of the two disciplines of rowing -- the one where scullers use two oars or sculls.

Shell: Can be used interchangeably with boat.

Slide: The set of runners for the wheels of each seat in the boat.

Starboard: The right side of the boat, while facing forward, in the direction of movement.

Stern: The rear of the boat; the direction the rowers are facing.

Straight: Refers to a shell without a coxswain, i.e. a straight four or straight pair.

Stretcher or Foot stretcher: Where the rower’s feet go. The stretcher consists of two inclined footrests, which hold the rower’s shoes. The rower’s shoes are bolted into the footrests.

Stroke: The rower who sits closest to the stern. The stroke sets the rhythm for the boat; others behind him must follow his cadence.

Stroke Coach: A small electronic display that rowers attach in the boat to show the important race information like stroke rate and elapsed time.

Sweep: One of the two disciplines of rowing, where rowers use only one oar. Pairs (for two people), fours (for four people) and the eight are sweep boats. Pairs and fours may or may not have a coxswain. Eights always have a coxswain.

Swing: The hard-to-define feeling when near-perfect synchronization of motion occurs in the shell, enhancing the performance and speed.
